ABSTRACT

This bibliography is a classified list of published research material on the contemporary Indian political system. The research references assembled have been organized under three broad categories: Indian political institutions, Indian political behavior, and public policy issues. The political institutions section focuses on the presidency, parliament, supreme court, bureaucracy, and the cabinet. The political behavior section includes electoral behavior, public opinion, ethnic politics, and political partisan behavior. The public policy section covers populations, foreign policy, agriculture, and education. Divided into 22 sub-categories, the references are organized alphabetically within the topics.

PREFACE

This bibliography is a classified list of published research materials on contemporary Indian political system. India had been under the British rule till the year 1947 and had remained as a British dominion until 1950. On the 26th of January 1950, the people of India had established a Republican form of government with a new Indian Constitution. This collection of published research on Indian politics is limited to the period starting 1950 to the present time. A few historical studies have been included about the evolution of the Indian Constitution.

The research references assembled have been under three broad categories: Indian political institutions, Indian political behavior, and public policy issues. This covers three approaches of political scientists about India. Some political scientists who are interested in political institutions will be interpreted in the studies on institutions like the presidency, parliament, supreme court, bureaucracy and the cabinet system.

The next section on Indian political behavior includes studies on electoral behavior, public opinion, ethnic politics, and political partisan behavior in India. These studies would be of interest to the political behavior students.

The final section deals with public policies in India. These deal with major policy issues in India including population, foreign policy, agriculture, education and other issues. These studies would be of interest to researchers interested in public administration of India.

This work was completed as an independent study project also under Dr. Glenn Perry. Dr. Manindra Mohapatra, Director Center for Governmental Services also guided this bibliography research. Shirley Herrington typed the final manuscript.
